Sparks, New, 2-17-31.

"I cheerfully say that BONANO'S decidedly the best drink I have ever used and I have tried all the cereal products that I have known I have not only recommended it to acquaintances, but to dealers telling them as I tell you, that it is the very finest, and I am quite a fancier of smooth, bland, fine-flavored coffee. We use BONANO not more than half as strong as directions and many would not know it from a mild smooth coffee. Dr. _____ of Reno, is like myself a physician and he is warm in his praises of BONANO also."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one druggist who has learned that science has been able to cure in all its stages and in all latencies, HALL'S CATARRH CURE. This is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and restoring nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Surveyor Becomes Highway Supt.

Under the new law passed by the legislature, the county surveyor becomes County Highway Superintendent at an additional salary of from $800 to $1,500 as fixed by the commissioners.

In the townships at the 1912 November election a township highway superintendent will be elected to serve at a salary of from $3 to $5 per day, for every day engaged, the duty of fixing the salary devolving upon township trustees. Some of his duties will be to erect signs or guide posts at road crossings showing the direction and distances to the nearest village or city; to measure all roads with an instrument known as a cyclometer or otherwise as directed by the State Highway Commissioner; to report to the State Highway Commissioner annually the manner in which roads have been improved showing those which have been surfaced with gravel, crossovers, bituminous macadam or paved with brick and those which have been shaved and crowned but have not received any surfacing. Two other copies of this report are to be filed with the township clerk and the County Highway Superintendent or surveyor.

This latter officer has general supervision over the Township Highway Superintendents in the county and works in conjunction with the state officials in repairing and building roads.

Build Your Front Steps of Concrete

You can easily do it yourself. Buy a few sacks of Portland Cement and mix with clean sand. Fill the board forms with this mixture and let them stand until the concrete is dry. Any workman can do this. And the result is a handsome flight of steps that can be built of wood—better than stone—and everlasting. They will never need repainting nor painting.

We Will Gladly Show You How to mix the concrete. You can not go wrong if you use Universal Portland Cement and clean sand in the proper proportions. The cost is a mere trifle.

SILAGE

Economizes Over Other Feeds.

BY C. H. RUF,
Dairy Department, College of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

Owners of cows should consider the importance of feeding more economically than they have in the past. Silage is one of the feeds that should not be ignored by the average dairyman, even though he is the owner of but ten cows.

A man owning a farm of 100 to 150 acres usually has pasture for possibly 125 days in the year. During the balance of the time, 240 days, which is the feeding time, ensilage should play an important part.

This problem may be illustrated as follows: The amount of silage necessary for ten cows for the above period, assuming that the cows are fed an average of 40 pounds per day, would be 48 tons. A fair average yield of green corn per acre is 12 tons. At this rate four acres would furnish a sufficient amount of silage to feed 10 cows for 240 days.

According to statistics, it costs $12 per ton to raise this corn; hence the cost of the four acres would be $52. It costs approximately 75 cents per ton to fill a silo, making the total cost of filling the silo in this instance $39. This would make a total cost of $91, the cost of silage for 10 cows for 240 days. The cost of silage for one cow for 240 days would be $8.80.

An equivalent of food material in timothy hay would be 12 tons, which at $18 per ton would cost $216, making a cost of $216 to feed one cow for 240 days.

To furnish nutrients equivalent to silage, it will require 11 tons of oat hay, which is worth $16 per ton. This would amount to $176 for the 10 cows or $17.60 for one cow for 240 days.

We can not legitimately compare clover or alfalfa with silage, because the protein in these feeds does not compare with that in the silage.

The economy of feeding silage is even more evident when compared with rations in which timothy or oat hay, corn or bran, replace the ensilage, as for illustration:

14 pounds of timothy hay
8 pounds of clover hay
6 pounds of bran
4 pounds of corn
1 pound of linseed meal
40 pounds of silage
8 pounds of clover hay
5 pounds of bran
4 pounds of corn
1 pound of linseed meal

The above rations contain approximately the same food material, but at present prices the first ration would cost $3.30 per cent more than the second. This saving would amount to about $18 per cow per year, or to $180 for the 10 cows.

WHY SOME CORN BLOWS OVER.

Some farmers wonder why corn blows over in some fields and not in others. If the corn that has blown over is in a field that has been in corn for two years or more in succession, probably the corn root worm is the cause of the trouble. This insect has been a serious pest in some sections of the state, particularly where rotation of crops is not regularly practiced.

Corn Root Worm.
The eggs of the corn root worm are laid in the ground near the base of the stalk some time in the fall. The eggs hatch in June and the worms first feed upon the small roots of the growing corn plant, then burrow into the large roots. The root system is seriously injured if the worms are plentiful, and a rain with some wind will cause the corn to blow over. The worms are about one-half inch in length, with a red or brown head. In late summer they enter the pupa stage and soon come out as adult beetles, about one-fourth of an inch long.

The adult northern corn root worm is a plain grass green, while that of the southern corn root worm is yellowish green with twelve black spots on its back. The larvae of the species are very similar. The adults feed on the corn silks in the fall, and the farmer often thinks they are seriously affecting the corn, but by that time they have done all of the damage they can except to lay their eggs, which will hatch the following spring.

The northern corn root worm is easily controlled, because the larvae feed on no roots except those of the corn, so a simple rotation will starve them out. The number of worms per hill increases in direct proportion to the number of years the land has been in corn. The rotation of crops will not control the southern corn root worm to as great an extent, because the larva of this species feeds on the roots of other plants.

Plan a rotation for next year in such a way that corn will not be in the same field that produced corn last year, and you will prevent the loss from the root worm.

The Wonders of Red Tape.

This story of official stupidity bound with red tape comes from France. A farmer's boy had a row with his master and hanged himself on a tree on the railway a short time near Auden court. The local official of Bertry, having been informed of the act, went in haste to the place and was just about to cut down the boy when it occurred to him that perhaps the tree was not in his jurisdiction. He accordingly then went for his colleague of Trolleville, with whom he had a long and heated argument on the spot of the suicide. Alas having been duly consulted, it was decided that the tree grew neither in Bertry nor Trolleville, but in Auden court. The matter having already been called to the attention of this official without result, an appeal was made to the central authority at Caudey. A detachment of soldiers was accordingly sent from this place, which cut down the body. By this time it was twenty-five hours since the lad had hanged himself and of course he was dead, but this seems by no means certain to have been the condition when the first officer reached the place.

A Heavy Load.

Jim Sloan, who is commander in chief of the secret service men guarding the president, is famous for his dreams. In one night's sleep he can run round the earth, climb the Andes or discover the south pole.

On the last morning of one of the flying trips the president takes Sloan, looking pale and exhausted, climbed slowly out of his berth. The party had been on rails for four days, and the journey had been a grinding, tiresome journey.

"I'm worn out, utterly exhausted," said Sloan sadly.

"What's the matter?" asked one of his companions.

"Oh," he said despairingly, "I dreamed all last night that the rear truck of the president's car had come off and I had to run along in place of it and hold the car off the ground. I did that for 353 miles."—Washington Star.

They Live in the Trees.

Human tree dwellers are not yet extinct. A Malayan newspaper describes an interesting discovery made in South Canara. The Kndiyas, living near Mangalore, include, it appears, a clan who have become tree dwellers by necessity. They live in huts built amid palm and other tall trees in order to protect themselves against attacks of elephants and other wild beasts of the jungle. Their clothing consists of the bark of certain kinds of jungle trees, and they subsist on yams and meat. They are dark skinned and noted for their fine physique, the women being even more muscular than the men, and one of their chief occupations is honey gathering, a very dangerous employment, since the bees of Canara build their honeycombs on the tree tops, often as much as 120 feet high.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Next Antarctic Search.

The London Express reports that an Antarctic expedition "under lines" is to leave England next August. Its commander, Dr. A. Forbes Mackay, does not intend to make a dash for the pole or to break any records. His object will be to map out the coast line of the antarctic continent for 2,000 miles—from Graham's Land to King Edward VII. Land. "Dr. Mackay's plan," says the Express, "will necessitate the ascent by a landing party of the great frozen plateau inland and the descent elsewhere on the unknown shore. To economize time and money he purposes to obviate the necessity of a return journey by being landed at one point on the coast and picked up at a rendezvous at the other end of his journey."
